B.S. in Environmental Health and Wellness

Are you interested in helping people live a healthier lifestyle? Do you want to be a part of a growing number of professionals leading the way in wellness program development? Do you believe a healthy planet is essential for achieving individual wellness? Unity College's B.S. in Environmental Health and Wellness provides a uniquely environmental focus for those seeking careers in helping people and the planet.

Employers are implementing wellness and sustainability initiatives and need qualified professionals with the necessary training to lead successful wellness programs that result in healthier (and happier) people.

The B.S. in Environmental Health and Wellness teaches key skills and concepts such as fundamental knowledge of human health, behavior change, and healthcare benefits, as well as foundational understanding of larger environmental issues that impact our health. Leave with the skills necessary to design wellness programs for communities, businesses, non-profits, and government agencies.
