REGENERATIVE HOTEL MANAGEMENT PROGRAM

The B.S. in Regenerative Hotel Management prepares students to oversee daily lodging operations, supervise staff, manage finances, enforce health and safety standards, and collaborate with suppliers and local vendors. This program provides insight into regenerative hospitality, including the sustainable use of resources and contributions to destination vitality, all while ensuring a positive guest experience.

Develop essential skills related to communication, entrepreneurship, and the "service mindset;" understand the breadth of the tourism and hospitality sector; gain familiarity with sustainability challenges associated with hospitality; learn about the regenerative hospitality movement; and make recommendations for sustainable decisions related to supply chains, visitor experiences, and hotel operations. Students will be prepared to apply their skills to lodging management positions, including working for global hotel chains, resorts, smaller lodging facilities (e.g., B&Bs), or as independent lodging owners.

GRADUATES WILL BE ABLE TO:

- + Differentiate between tourism and hospitality and the ways that these sectors are interrelated.
- + Apply concepts of regenerative hospitality and sustainable business to evaluate hospitality experiences and make suggestions for improved social, environmental, and economic outcomes.
- + Make decisions about daily hotel activities that incorporate regenerative principles, industry standards, business acumen, and visitor expectations.
- + Interpret qualitative and quantitative data to understand hospitality trends and inform hotel management decisions.
